INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE. JERMAIN & BRIGHTMAN,

Publishers and Preprietors. MONDAY MORNING, MARCH 5, 1860.

The Speeck of the Session. On Wednesday last, Senstor SEWARD, of New York, delivered a speech for the prompt admiration of Kansas into the Union, which is pronounced on all Lands to be the ablest effort of the session. The New York papers, without distinction of party, concur in peaking of it in terms of the highest praise. The Tribune, the Times, the Herald, and the Courier, representing four differents phases of polities, agree at least in their estimate of this statesmanlike, able and national aldress. We have only room, this morning, for the comments of the N. Y. Courier

& Engainer; but hope, within a day or two, or two, to lay the speech itself before our readers, that they may see how well the emconlume of the Courier were deserved. Cratico Marce.—On Monday, the 27th of February, a match at ourling was played on bilver Lake, between eight players from the town of Dekorra, and a like number from Portage City. The day was rather unfavorable, and the contest was not as keen as it might have been had the day been more favorable. The result of the day's curling, however, stood as follows:

Physicis—Bink No. 1 45 shots. PORTAGE CITY, Bink No. 2 10 shots.

We would not probably have taken any notice of this game, had it not been for the boasting made by the players of Portage, who, in a match lately played between them and some players from Caledonia, were very auxious to have the public know that they were merely greenhorns, and that the players from Caledonia were old and experienced curlers. Whether they have the same opinion of themselves now, is for them to say; as for us, we are satisfied that it will be necessary for them to improve their time before they again play the curlers of Dekorra, who will be likely to remain victorious, until the greenhorns of Portage, as they call themselves, are willing to acknowledge themselves selves, and winning and to be experienced curlers. "SUBSCRIBER,"

Considerable excitement seems to have been created in Horicon, recently, over a sow supposed to have died from hydrophobia. A post mortem examination however, showed that she came to her death by eating a bushel and a half of No. 1 wheat.

Senator Seward's Great Speech.

om the N. Y. Courier & Enquirer, March 146 From the N. V. Courier & Enquirer, March 1st.

The speech of the Hon. William H. Seward on the admission of Kansas, delivered in the U. S. Senate, is published in full in our columns this morning. It is the noble utterance of a wise, calm, and patriotic statesman, on the great disturbing question of the day, and breathes a spirit tending, not to form at, but allay the national excitement which that question has called forth. It should be read by every citizen of this Republic, and the great political truths and ordide, and the great political truths and principles which it enunciates in language free from all passion, personality, and bittern as of feeling, and which embrace in their swe-p, as with one great conservative band of Constitutional Right, the whole Union.

North and South, should find a hearty assent to the sober reason and enlightened patriotism of every American. Founded on the noble text—that "it will be an overflowing and Theodore Wetterkin Clerk. The apsource of chame, as well as of sorrow, if we, thirty millions—Europeaus by extraction, Americans by birth or discipline, and Christians by faith, and meaning to be such in practice—cannot so combine prudence with humanity, in our conduct concerning the one disturbing subject of slavery, as not on-ly to preserve our unequalied institutions of Freedom, but also to enjoy their benefits with contenument and harmony"--it is a speech which has never been surpassed in the Senate Chamber of the United States, in the strength of argument, truth of senti-ment, and dignity of tone, with which the duty of preserving the institutions of Free-

Mr. Seward opened his speech by contrast ing states with free labor, designating the State States Capital States, and the Free States Labor States. He then showed how the fathers of the Republic adjusted the question of Slavery, and how in these latthe days their wise policy has been departed from by the Democratic party, which, being the champion of Slavery extension, or in other words, of the Southern policy of cap-ital, has made itself the great sectional party of the Union. Mr. Seward quoted instances to prove his position. He said that Mr. Van Buren lannehed a prospective veto against the anticipated measure of removing Slavery from the District of Columbia. A Demofrom the District of Columbia. A Demo-cratic Congress brought Texas into the Union, stipulating practically for its future re-organization in four Slave States. Mr. S. Compromise, and its effect upon the Territo-ry of Kansas. He spoke of the efforts of the Democratic party to make Kansas a Slave State, and to force it into the Union as such, and denounced that party's effort to mask itself behind the battery of the Supreme Court.

The same party, he said, was itself responsible for the act to subvert the free Republic of Nicaragna, and open it to Slavery and the African Slave Trade. Mr. S. said the Rapublican party embodies the popular protest and reaction against a policy which has been fastened upon the nation by surprise and which its reason and conscience, concurring with the reason and conscience of mankind, condemn. He speke of the coming Presi-dential campaign, and the Republicans holding to the principles of preventing the Ter-ritories, by constitutional means, from be-ceming homes for Slavery and Polygamy.— He said the policy of the Republican party was to stand by the Freedom of Speech and of the Preas; the speedy improvement of the public domain by homestead laws, and it will encourage mining, manufacture and internal commerce, with needful connections between the Atlantic and Pacific States. Mr. Seward then passed on to prove that the Republican party is not a sectional organization, that its principles are national, that it is no assailant of States, that all the States were parcels of his own country, that it was well and wisely arranged that the States were sow-reign on the subject of Siavery within their own borders. He said John Brown and his associates acted on carnest, though fatally erroneous convictions. He pronounced the act an act of sedition and treason, and the act an act of section and treason, and ble lecturer, conjoined with the object for criminal in just the extent that it affected the which he speaks, and the interest naturally public peace, and was destructive of human In his peroration, Mr. Saward treats the In his peroration, Mr. Saward treats the subject of disunion in a masterly manner.—

He fears no menaces of disunion; they are unnatural and hasty, and no hand will be found to execute them. His hope for the Union is founded on constitutional right—on the principle that the Union is "a Government of the whole people—as individuals as well as a compact of States," that that Union now "forms the central figure in the economy of the world a civilization and the bast on now "forms the central nature in the econ-omy of the world's civilization, and the best sympathies of mankind favor its continu-ance," and he expects that "it will stand and work right on, until men shall fear its failure no more than we now apprehend that the sun will cease to hold its eternal place in Ward, and leaves behind him a wife and two

All honor to William H. Seward! We thank him for his noble windication of the cardinal and conservative principles of this Republic, and we ask all who solerly and disparational bits are all the solerly and disparational the solerly and the dispassionately read his speech, which seems to come to us like a voice from the Senate Chamber of the Fathers of the Revolution, whether the interests and rights of all parts of this Union would not only be safe, but be upheld in all their integrity, in the hands of William H. Seward as its President.

In other kinds of Insurance the probabiliies that loss will not occur are greatly in preponderance, it being expected that not nore than one policy out of five hundred r one thousand will ever have to be paid, out in this it is known that every life policy must, at some time, be paid. Death is abso utely certain. Rates must accordingly be ixed upon, which, with compound interest upon them will, in the average, pay the losses and necessary expenses. These rates eminent nothematicians have calculated, and one huntred years experience has rectified and veriled them, so that they are now looked upon is entirely reliable and safe.

Professor DE MORGAN, one of the best authorities, states his deliberate conviction that "there is nothing in the commercial which approaches, even remotely, to the security of a well-established and prudently-managed Life Insurance Company.

A ship, as it grows older, pays, year by year, a higher premium; but in Life Insurance when a policy is once taken out, the premium remains the same, and though discase may soon afterward develop so as to make the risk extremely hazardous, the insured has the privilege of keeping up his policy at the same yearly rate. This fact and the other fact that every life policy must at some time be paid, make an essential dilference between Life and other forms of Insurance, and make it necessary that the rates should be higher than the rates for temporary profection upon property.

The premium, or !'tax'' as some call it, is not higher, however, even for a man commencing quite late in life, than the yearly taxes levied by city and State authorities upon property in any other form. In short. any intelligent man who will investigate the subject will come to Dr. FRASKLIN's conclusion, that in no way can one more easily or surely make future provision for his family than by Life Assurance. It gives a man a once the banefit of an average duration of life in which to make accumulations for his family, and this benefit he can attain in no other way.

Such are a few of the principles which pertain to this important subject. Let all, rich and poor, ponder them, and see if they do not appeal to their better judgment and their best feelings; and having pondered, let them not procrastinate, but act. BUCK BIER DAY .- Malms serves up his superior Buck Bier to-day at the Menomone Saloon on East Water street. We find a keg left at our house, directed to "Skimnilk," to whom it will be duly forwarded. The Menomonee is too well known to the gentlemen who appreciate lunch and pure Lager, to need puffing. We always patronize MELMS when we feel inclined to quench thirst, and always get in good company at the Menomonee. We do not pretend to be a superior judge of Bier, but we have it from the best authority that MELMs makes the best. Certain it is the East Water street people seem to think so; and there are not a few families that keep a keg of his manufacture always on hand for table use, it being both nutritious and agreeable. To those given to beer drinking we should say, go to MELMS by all means.

BUMOBED BARRAPITIES AT THE UTICA

INSANE ASYLUM.—The Utica Asylum affair is creating considerable attention in Albany and New York. There has been for some time a current rumer of brutal treatment from the hands of the under-keepers in that institution, and an Investigating Committee has been appointed. There is, also, a rumor that the under o ward-keepers are in the habit, when any patient will not go into the cell at their request or offers any resistance, to jump upon him, thrusting their knees into his sides, and otherwise brutally treating and disfiguring him, and then placing a blanket before the glassdoor in the cell, so that the principal keeper cannot see him when he passes through the different parts of the institution.

Another Sickles Affair-Over THE LANT. — Quite a sensation was orested the other day in our usually quiet city, upon the announcement that one Ulirich had shot Mr. J. Binz, of this city, for appropriating his (U.'s) wife. But when the truth came out it was found that no one was actually shot only scared. The circumstances, as near as we can learn

The circumstances, as near as we can learn them, are briefly as follows:

About two years ago, the above parties were residing at Chicago. Ullrich was the fortunate possessor of a handsome and affectionate wife (it has turned out that the "affectionate" part was not all as it might be).

B. lived directly opposite U.'s, and in due course of time, it seems, captivated the charming Mrs. U. She proceeded to Indiana and procured a "snap" divorce, and married B. The said couple left for a more agreeable climate. U. had been led to believe that they had gone to Georgia, and to Georgia he went. When there he was informed that they had left there for California, the land of runaways. He goes to California, and hears that they have gone to Australia—to the far-off land he goes. No traces of them there.

His search so far having proved fruitless, he returns in despair. Arriving home he discovers that he has been on a wild-goose chase all the time, for the pair had never been to Georgia. California or Australia, but had been most of the time in this city. He comes here and finds that the pair are living here, and on Monday morning Last he espied B. sawing wood near his residence. does not discover him until within a lew test.

B. makes a break round the house forthwithibus, and his aggressor runs in another direction without shooting.

A warrant was issued for U., who was arrested. An examination was held before the Police Justice, which resulted in U. being found over to appear at the next term of Court to appear at the charge of we don't ourt, to answer to the charge of -- we don't know what .- Sheboyjan Journal.

ME. PRESIDENT:—At no period since the

of school management and instruction, until this Union into life, and we are here to pledge our undying efforts to its support, maintenance and perpetuation. In that spirit which states and others, which is reached directly so many teachers, and so many parents, as the Institute, or been so universally acceptable and useful. We hope there will go against the Democratic party in the election itself, he will go into the Convention with a larger vote than any other candidate.

But be us analyze this vote, The one hundred and twenty Bouthern votes, and the seven votes of the Paolic slope, Judge Dong-instance, before the Convention, so that if he gets the entire one to two weeks each as soon as he shall we are here to priceless before one to two weeks each as soon as he shall we are here as one there or institutions and sovereignty are upheld and secured. And we are here to pledge our undying efforts to its support, mainted our fathers it to risk all and to peril all? in the establishment of a Union, the horse here they would say there are here to say that we will avert, in some the laws and guaranties by which their institutions and sovereignty are upheld and secured. And we are here to pledge our undying efforts to its support, mainted our fathers it to risk all and to peril all? in the establishment of a Union, there were here to say that we will avert, in blood if it be necessary, as they would say the reached directly so many teachers, and so many parents, as the Institute, or been so universally acceptable and useful. We hope there will be an early and enthusiastic response to this invitation.

TRACHER'S INSTITUTES—1860.

The undersigned will appoint and provide for its dismemberment or destruction. We are here to say that we will an each each our distribution or its dismemberment or destruction. We are here to say that we will an each each our fathers it to risk all and to purely in the establishment of a Union, the state our fathers it to risk all and to purely in the establishment of a Union, the here is a we are here also to utter our outspoken de-nunciations of that atrocious violation of the provision of our Constitution which guaran-tees "to citizens of each State all the priviloges and immunities of citizens of the several States," in the expulsion and banishment of citizens without an allegation of crine, unless that be one which prefers Freedom to Slavery that be one which prefers Freedom to Slavery and the expression of a desire that all should share and enjoy its blessings.

We are here furth emore to request of our countrymen in the South to desix from all further threats and combinations which menace distunion, and to say to the men of the North, do nothing and say nothing that will increase or inflame the discord that is now temporarily with us. The truth and the right will prevail, moderation will soon prove to be the harbinger of justice and peace, and all sections and all paties will, with patient and wise counsels, soon feel the gental glow of strength in our re-established fellowship. Our relations will then be to each to there, as those that bound our ancestors in a discount of New East Emillors of forat quality. other, as those that bound our ancestors in a common bond of union, and the inscription on our country's banner will then be, as it floats over land and sea, "A happy, prosper-ous, powerful and united people."

Woman's Veneration.—If women have been marked the American Cag, just one the party caused the American Cag, just one work made the man, it is toward voneration. They are born worshippers—makers of silver shrines, for some direct one to party has ever not in State under the star of the containing the star of the conta vania county, as Capt. Vincent Witchers was taking testimony relative to the divorce of his grand daughter from a man named Glemens, Clemens and his brother became angry and fired revolvers, grazing Witcher's clothing. The latter fired, and shot both dead. A grandson of Witcher's, named Smith, attempted to enter, when the third Clemens fired upon him. Smith immediately killed him with a bowle-knife.

He called to paralogy to attend all patients at the reservoir the attending physician, whose the constitution of Greenway not to leave the house on any account, and then it struck him for the first time that there was in the him for the first time that there was in the warning an implied hint that he would have cause to have it. He tried to solve the mystery, but found it no easy matter now to attribute it to a practical joke of Greenway to try his nerves. "What if the house should be entered by burglars?" he asked himself. "What could I do against the desperadoes?" Here he pulled out the revolvers and looked at them for a moment, as though they were companions and actually imbured with a certain degree of sociability—feiling, too, some companions and sectiony inforced with a cer-tain degree of sociability—feeling, too, some satisfaction in knowing that if the house was entered, he would have a a rare oppor-tunity of displaying his courage and winning the applause of his friends. Suddenly be the applause of his friends. Suddenly lie heard the door-knob spring quickly, as though it had been turned cantiously round and then reliognished suddenly. There was no delusion, then, in this! Ho actually heard it. And as he started up, a voice within him—and not his own—swined to say: "There is some one clse in the house besides worself."

He laid the pistels Greenway had given him, on the table, and taking his own (one that he always carried and knew he could depend on ) he went to the door, unlooked it and walked out. There was nothing visible but the statuette in the niche at the head of

out the statuetts in the niche at the head of the stairs, looking ghostly as the light of the candle fell upon it, and making the black chasm over the stairs tor-fold more black.— White he stood thus in the doorway, holding the candle above his head, he heard the same creaking noise below, as though somebody had gone down the steps. There was a sensible shock of cold run down Ed.'s back, like the gone down the steps. There was a sensible sincek of cold run down Ed.'s back, like the premonition of a chill, but with it came the dogged determination to know whether he was alone in the house, and the dupe of his own senses. He locked the door, leaving a light as before, and went cautionsly down to the lower hall, shading the candle with his hand as well as he could to prevent its being blown out. He examined the hall door. It remained as he had left it. He tried the parlor doors; they were locked. He peered down the basement stairway and listened, but not a sound met his ear. "Then I am a fool it seems," he said aloud, and came back. In mounting the stairs of the second story he cautiously gave his whole weight to every step to see if it were possible to cause a repetition of the same creaking noise he had before heard, and when he had taken five steps from the bottom and heard, as he placed his foot on the sixth, the identical noise that had reached him above as he stood in the doorfoot on the sixth, the identical noise that had reached him above as he stood in the doorway, it affected him even more than had the turning of the knob. It seemed to be the elinching of a rightful fact, that invisible agencies, material or immaterial, were in the beautiful fact.

On regaining the room above, the door was found to be locked as he had left it the lire was burning brightly and the warm atmosphere felt agreeable; but the pistols were gone from the table! In vain he searched the room for them; they had been effectually spirited away. This unmanned Ed. entirely. He drew a chair up to the fire so that his back was to the wall, and lighting a fresh cigar, leaned against the marble seat of the grate, and waited nervously for further demonstrations.

But he smoked the eight out and drank The smokes the cigar out and drams the spirits without interruption, and sat wondering and thinking very intently. He regretted that he had not a companion to corroborate his statements, which he knew would all be attributed to inagination, and thinking very intently. would are be attributed to imagination, and trying in various ways to account for the turning of the knob and the disappearance of the pistols on some philosophical theory, until he found he was getting sleepy, and there being no more indications of disturbance, he lit another candle, and threw himself on the bed, taking care to keep his pistolvin his hand. It was a good while before the nervous excit ment was always sufficient. the nervous excitement was allayed sufficientby for him to sleep; and even then it seemed to him as though there was a semi-consciousness of the fire and the dancing shadows of the furniture, with an indistinct and uneasy dream. And so, like the Irishman, he should have onen. stept with one eye open.

Ilowever, it must have been near morning

However, it must have been near menning when he became gradually aware of a noise that seemed to proceed from the door heading to the passage way and stairs. He list-ned, and distinctly heard whispering, and then the bending of the door, as though a great pressure had been brought to hear upon it. He knew in a moment, as if by intuition, that these were the burglars; and had placed his hands on either side of his rody to spring from the bed, when his eye fell suddenly on the full figure of a man not two feet distant, standing between the bed and the window. standing between the bed and the window.
